n election is a living, breathing thing. Its body and soul, the voter master file, changes hour-by-hour throughout the year as we add new voters, remove others, change voters' addresses, and so on. The numbers on these pages are a benchmark of the enormity of the job of keeping track of more than 600,000 registered voters and administering an election process that by-and-large enjoys the unqualified confidence of the residents of St. Louis County.

Democracy Was in the Air email received on Oct. 30th

I voted in person at your office over lunch today. I was impressed by the efficiency and attitude of the workers at your office. The lunch time voting crowd was large, but it was apparent that everyone working at the office was making every effort to help people through the process quickly and painlessly. Democracy was in the air.

Tim Larson Ferguson

But the winds of change are blowing out of Washington and Jefferson City. It's probably a safe bet that elections in our county, and across the state, will change dramatically over the coming years as a result of the problems experienced in Florida in November 2000. We saw the first of those changes in the 2002 General election as Missouri election officials implemented "provisional voting," a fail-safe device designed to make sure everyone legally entitled to vote was able to cast a ballot.

More than any single factor, 2002 was dominated by legislation. First came Senate Bill 675, a joint effort of the state senate and house of representatives that brought us the possibility of "advance" voting in presidential elections, and added a new classification of caregiver for an incapacitated person to the list of those eligible to cast an absentee ballot. While we were required to submit a plan to implement advance voting, it is doubtful at this time that the legislature will fund its considerable cost.

Missouri's presidential primary election was also moved forward one month, to February.

An amendment to the elections bill required the election board to redraw our township lines after each decennial census. The last time this was done was in 1996 when the number of those districts was increased from 23 to 28. The federal courts redrew our lines seven years ago, and the same guidelines that were laid down then were followed this time around.

A good many of the election reforms passed by our state lawmakers were enacted in anticipation of the all-but-certain passage of legislaof the all-but-certain passage of legislation at the federal level. Other features, such as the coming expansion of our existing statewide voter database, are the sole initiative of the United States Congress. In September congress passed the "Help America Vote Act of 2002," the most far-reaching measure ever enacted by the federal government to impose a minimum structure on the states' patchwork of election administration and voting standards.

The most immediate effect of this law will be an upgrade of Missouri's statewide voter database. This could occur as soon as Jan. 2004, but in no case would it be later than 2006.

A centrally managed, statewide registry of voters assures uniform standards for maintenance of voter registration information and eliminates duplicate registrations within the state. This can and often does happen when someone registers to vote in a new county of residence, but fails to remove his name

Although the possibility of someone voting in different counties in the same election has always existed, the instance of a single voter casting multiple ballots is rare. This will nonetheless give the public the added assurance that everything possible is being done to protect the integrity of the voting process.

The centerpiece of Help America Vote is an emphasis on a resolution of problems related to punch card voting brought to light in the presidential election in Florida.

We look for these preliminary stages to be concluded by the summer of 2003. If that's the case, and the right mix of federal grants, and state and county funding becomes available, we could see major changes in voting equipment in time for the 2004 presidential election.

In the not-too-distant future, the punch cards that have served us for more than a quarter century will give way to a system that will meet the fail-safe and handicapped accessibility standards set by our elected officials in Washington and Jefferson City.

Over the coming months we will be working closely with the secretary of state's office to implement these changes.

Respectfully,

Judy Taylor and David Welch Directors of Elections

St. Louis County has used punch cards since 1975. It is in fact still the system of choice for 43 of Missouri's 116 election authorities. Punch card voting has many advantages. Contrary to the image the media has portrayed, it's highly accurate. Recounts are common in St. Louis County, especially after our April municipal elections. In the last 17 years though, we haven't had a single election turn around on a recount. The system is also economical to administer. A ballot card costs just under 5-1/2 cents. Although this is an ongoing expense for each election, it's a pittance compared to the enormous outlay to purchase a new, state-of-the-art system.

While the intent of the congress is clearly to improve our election system, they stopped short of mandating a specific method for tabulating votes. Advisory commissions at the federal level, still to be formed, will make recommendations and write performance standards for voting equipment and other issues.

Provisional Ballots Counted by Township - November General Election

In 2002 the Missouri legislature opted to follow the lead of the U.S. Congress and implement "provisional voting," allowing a voter whose registration status is not readily discernable at the polls to vote a ballot. Only after the election, when the eligibility of the voter has been verified, would the ballot be counted.

Current state law calls for provisional voting only when federal or statewide offices or issues are being voted on.

This biennial report deals exclusively with registered voters: voters by township, by senate district, representative district, by municipality. A political analyst will look at these statistics to plan a political campaign or voter registration drive. Current demographic information and a statistical analysis of voting results are key components to planning and executing a successful run for office.

Go to www.stlouisco.com/elections/electionresults.html to research any election since April 1996. Demographics on median age, income, household size, and other interesting facts are available on the St. Louis County Department of Planning website at www.stlouisco.com/plan/factbook/census2k

2002 Legislative Summary

State Legislation

Federal Legislation

(Help America Vote Act of 2002)

- Advance voting required Missouri's election authorities to submit to the Secretary of State, no later than Dec. 31, 2002, a plan to implement advance voting. If funded by the legislature, it would require the St. Louis County Election Board to provide no-reason early voting in presidential elections for a seven-day period beginning 14 days before the election and ending the Wednesday before the election.
- 115.225 The testing of new voting systems by an independent authority that meets standards developed by the Federal Election Commission would be required for any new voting systems in the state of Missouri.
- A new category of absentee voter, the caregiver of someone confined due to illness or disability, has been established.
- 115.291 Absentee ballots may now be returned to the election authority by a close relative. Previously, absentee ballots could only be sent through the U.S. mail, by registered carrier, or returned in person by the voter.
- 115.420 Butterfly ballots, which received so much notoriety in Florida in November 2000, are permitted only with the express approval of the secretary of state. A butterfly ballot utilizes facing pages of the ballot booklet and requires the voter to make ballot choices on both pages.
- 115.607 Reapportionment of St. Louis County's 28 townships after each decennial census is now required by state law. New township boundaries were drawn by the Board of Election Commissioners and approved Nov. 26, 2002
- 115.755 The presidential primary has been moved from March to the first Tuesday after the first Monday in February in presidential election years.
- 115.800 Provisional voting allows a voter whose registration status is not readily discernable at the polls to vote a ballot. Only after the election, when the eligibility of the voter has been determined, would the ballot be counted.

State law calls for provisional voting only when federal or statewide offices or issues are being voted on.

- Replacement or improvement of punch-card voting systems is provided for with $325 million to buy back punch-card systems and $325 million for improving election administration. Each state will receive at least $5 million under this program.
- A federal commission is established to administer grant programs and issue voluntary guidelines for election systems. The commission will administer the grant programs, provide for the certification and testing of voting systems, and study the election laws.
- Voting systems must provide voters an opportunity to check for and correct ballot errors.
- Provisional ballots are provided for to ensure that no one is turned away at the polls. Voters must be provided with a telephone number or an internet website to check on the disposition of their ballots. If the ballot was declined by the election authority, the reason must be given.
- Implement a centralized statewide voter database to ensure accurate voter lists.
- Federal criminal penalties are established for depriving voters of a fair election and providing false information in registering and voting.
- Mail registration cards are to include check-off boxes for citizenship and age.
- One voting machine, accessible to persons with disabilities, must be provided at every polling location by Jan. 1, 2006.
- ★ Voters with disabilities to benefit from a $100 million grant to increase handicapped accessibility to polling places.
- National Student & Parent Mock Election programs to receive $200 thousand to promote interest in government and elections.
- To encourage the recruitment of high school and college students as poll workers, the sum of $10 million has been appropriated.

In a late-breaking development regarding the scheduled 2004 presidential primary, a Missouri House panel has proposed cancelling that election, for next year only, to save the estimated $3.7 million it would cost the state.

Presidential Primary

The Primary Election Schedule

As of March 2003, the final schedule for the 2004 presidential primaries had yet to be set. Although Missouri's presidential primary, by state statute, was recently moved from March to February, many states had not settled on a date. Primary elections are established either by state law, or by negotiations between the state political organizations and the national parties. Those talks are still in progress.

New Hampshire law requires their primary be the first in the nation. That won't change. National Democratic party rules also support this by guaranteeing that state's first primary status. Likewise, Iowa's placement as first Democratic caucus state, held before the New Hampshire primary, is enshrined in national Democratic rules and traditions.

Allocation of Delegates

The number of delegates a state sends to the Democratic or Republican national conventions is determined by formulas set by the respective parties. In both cases the formulas take into account not only population (through the number of congressional districts or electoral votes) but also how well the party's past presidential nominee fared and the success of the state party in electing its members to office. In addition to the 50 states and the District of Columbia, American Samoa, Guam, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands send delegations to the conventions, however, their numbers are calculated differently (as is the District of Columbia for the Republicans.) Overall, Republican conventions have a much smaller number of delegates than do the Democrats — in 2000, the numbers were 2,065 versus 4,335.

Although the official symbol of Missouri Democrats since 1924 has been the "Goddess of Liberty," the venerable donkey in its various forms has long been identified nationally as the standard bearer of the Democratic party. Both the donkey and the Republican elephant had the same midwife, Thomas Nast of Harper's Weekly. This cartoon first appeared in 1870 and depicted the recently deceased Edwin Stanton, Secretary of War in the Lincoln and Johnson administrations, being assailed by the Democratic press, which Nast portrayed as the Copperhead press.

The rampant elephant of the GOP was born on the pages of Harper's Weekly in 1874, the creation of political cartoonist Thomas Nast. A cry of "Caesarism" had been taken up by Democratic politicians of the day in connection with the possibility of a third term bid by Republican president Ulysses S. Grant. An "ass" in lion's garb frightening an elephant (Republican voters) was depicted above by Nast. Interestingly, the ass in this drawing portrayed the liberal press. The Democratic party was the fox at the bottom of the picture. The Republicans suffered a drubbing in the 1874 mid-term elections, losing control of the House of Representatives. The ass later evolved into the Democratic donkey and the elephant came to represent the GOP.

In 1992 the Libertarian party gained "established party" status in Missouri when one of its candidates exceeded the required two percent threshold vote for a statewide office. Since the party's national symbol, the Statue of Liberty, was a virtual look-alike of the official Missouri Democratic symbol, the "Goddess of Liberty," the Show-Me State Libertarians instead chose the Liberty Bell.

In 1996 they switched to the Missouri Mule. This was allowed because the donkey had not been the official ballot symbol of the Democratic state party since 1924.
